Dear parents,

Warm greetings.

Your children have covered many milestones – they have learnt to play , work in a group. Their communication skills have developed they speak in short simple sentences and are able to follow classroom instruction in English. For a parent it is an immense pleasure when they see their child take one small step each day.

Inquisitiveness – curiosity is the greatest trait of every child. It is the mother of all forms of knowledge and art. A child naturally possesses curiosity he looks around with wonder and has many Questions about all that he sees. These questions are to be listened to attentively and answered satisfactorily by all who care for them – be it their family members or their teachers. If a child is not inquisitive then it is a Matter Of Concern. So a child's curiosity should never be curved (never snub a child though questions asked may appear absurd or irrelevant). Their curiosity should be satisfy using language and expression suitable of their age.

We at SHRISHTI take utmost care to allow a child to speak up his mind.

Another trait of a child is experimenting. Do we allow children to experiment freely without fear? Experiment alone leads to creation. A child can not create if he is not allowed to experiment.

So, in a guarded environment let a child explore and experiment. Let the child fall because then only will he rise and when he rises after a fall be rest assured he will not fall easily again – he has gained a balance and precision.

So dear parents, our's is a common goal – you do your part and be rest assured we at SHRISHTI are doing ours.....

Dear parents,

“Warm Greetings”

Autumn is in the air let your child observe and feel the changes in environment around him. The trees are shedding their leaves. It is the time of decay but it is also a time for rejuvenation. New leaves and new flowers will soon cover the bare branches. Make your child notice all these changes in nature.

Outdoor activities play an important role in a child’s formative years. Let your child play and run freely.

Please make sure to give positive encouragement and remarks to your child, this will boost up his self esteem. We at SHRISHTI are doing it a lot all the time.

This is the time for habit formation. Make sure to use words like “Please”, “Sorry”, “Thank you” when communicating, though you may feel that it is not necessary to say these words to a toddler or an infant.

A cheerful smile, a little pat on the cheek a nod of approval – goes a long way in making your child feel good about himself and all that he does.

So Dear Parents, Let’s be in touch as and when required, we are always there for you.
